

Jaime Pepper - Program Manager

Jaime Pepper joined EWI in 2015 and serves as Program Manager handling various types of communications including newsletters, the website, and social media. Jaime has a Master's degree in Sustainability and Environmental Management from the Harvard Extension School. Since 2012, Jaime has assisted Megan Epler Wood in teaching her course Environmental Management of International Tourism Development at the Harvard Extension School.

Because of a continued and evolving interest in green design and improved hotel efficiency, Jaime completed her Master's work Capstone Project with a proposal for a hypothetical design and life cycle analysis of a green roof atop a hotel in Boston, MA. Consulting directly with both hotel management and a local green roof installation company, she created a proposal that incorporated a custom design, projected costs, potential environmental savings, and an estimated payback period. Jaime's development interests include tourism, climate change, and local sustainable development.
