Tanner Knorr – Social Media and Communications Specialist

Tanner joins EWI as both a Teaching Assistant at Harvard Extension and as a volunteer to build EplerWood International's social media and communications presence to ensure stakeholders worldwide receive relevant information on education, training, and sustainable tourism management approaches.

Tanner holds a Bachelor's in Archaeology and a Master's in Administrative Studies, concentrating in Economic Development and Tourism Management from Boston University. Coming from an archaeological background, he is fascinated with the connections between ecotourism and cultural heritage management, with extensive research done in Menorca, Spain and Tanzania. He currently is the Associate Editor & Partner Blogger for Voy Study Abroad and manages their Twitter account.
